

Anganwadi worker thrashed for plucking flowers

- An Anganwadi worker suffered nasal injuries allegedly at the hands of a person following an incident where children innocently plucked flowers from his property. The incident unfolded on January 1 in Basurte village, Belagavi.
- According to reports, the Anganwadi children inadvertently plucked flowers from a neighboring house's land on their way back while returning from the toilet.
- Kalyani More, the landowner, who was returning from his farm, witnessed the act and, reportedly under the influence of alcohol, responded impulsively. He immediately struck the nose of the Anganwadi worker, Sugandha More, resulting in bleeding. She was swiftly taken to the hospital for urgent medical attention.
- Police said that Sugandha More and Kalyani More are relatives. Police have taken cognizance of the incident and registered a case. The victim is reported to be out of danger.

- Lakhimpur Kheri Superintendent of Police (SP) Ganesh Prasad Saha reached the post, investigated the area, and formed three investigation teams.
- The victim's mother claimed that police inaction led to her death. She said that had the police registered her complaint on time, they could have saved the girl, who was missing for two days.
- The SP said, "Prima facie, it looks like the girl was beaten to death as a lot of injury marks are visible, but we will figure out the facts after the post-mortem examination. We have engaged surveillance teams and teams from the nearby police stations. We are making all efforts to uncover the truth and people are also being questioned."
- "The family members have been talked to. They are not taking anyone's name right now," he added.
